

Study Script

This script describes the steps in the study and the directions we will provide. We may paraphrase directions or provide supplemental directions to facilitate participation, and we may repeat steps if unexpected issues occur (e.g., the camera fails to capture a photo).

Researcher:

Thank you for agreeing to participate in our research study.

Researcher:

This study is about artificial intelligence systems that take in photos and videos, then try to pick out and understand people's faces. We are trying to understand how and how well these systems work.

During the study, we will take a series of photos of you. We will give you guidance before each photo, such as whether to smile or frown. We may also change the lighting to bright or dark, or ask you to cover part of your face, or give you a prop to hold up or wear. We will look at how AI systems understood each photo before moving on to the next.

All the photos will be deleted after we have completed the study.

Before we begin, I want to check whether you have any questions or concerns about the study.

Researcher:

You can stop participating in the study at any time and for any reason. Just let us know.

Researcher:

Our first photo will be how you would normally pose for a photo.

[Take photo. The participant will not see the photo or any screen associated with facial analysis—the output will be sent to a monitor that is only visible to research staff.]

[For each task:]

Researcher:

For this next photo, please [description of study condition, see the attachment Study Conditions for a list of possible study conditions].

[If the condition involves holding an object, let the participant know that it has been sanitized or is brand new.]

[If the participant needs help holding or putting on an object, invite their parent/guardian to help and volunteer to help.]

After all study conditions are complete:

Researcher:

That concludes the photo part of the study. The last step in the study is completing a short survey.

[Provide exit survey on a device.]